Who is your favorite Author and why?

Suzanne LaFleur, because I really like the way she writes.

What genre do you prefer to read?

Realistic fiction because it is something I can relate to, but isn't real.

Where do you learn about books you might want to read in the future?

On social media.

Where do you like to read best?

In the small nook in my room.

Where is your favorite time of the day to read and why?

At the end of the day after school because it helps me relax.

Love, Aubrey by Suzanne LaFleur takes place in Virginia, where Aubrey and her grandma live. She makes new friends like Bridget, and even her crush. Her Dad and her sister passed away in a car crash, and she learns to be strong and independent.

Aubrey is a girl who is abandoned by her mother and figures out how to do things by herself. She even got a new fish, named Sammy. Her father and sister passed away a couple years ago from a car crash so she was very lonely. Not long later, her grandmother comes over to figure out that she is left home alone. Her grandma takes Aubrey to her house in Virginia. Aubrey even found a best friend, Bridget. The theme of this book is Independence and loving others.

I recommend this book to people who are or like to be independent, and like to read sad books. This book is also for the people who can't stop reading a book once they start. This was a great book, and I really enjoyed it. I hope people get a chance to read it, too.
