Where do you like to read best?

I like to read in my bed or a comfy couch.

Ane of Avonlea by L.M. Montgomery, tells a story of Anne becoming a grown up and having more responsibilities. At the age of 16, Anne is a new school teacher with a new class. She takes up the responsibilities of adopting two children named, Dora and Davy, and also running a neighborhood improvement society. Anne realizes that she wants everyone to love her but that's not the case.

Anne is starting her new job at the Avonlea school and wants all her students to like her but she realizes that all but one do. She tries to win the boy's affection by treating him with respect, but she wins his trust by doing something she never wanted to do. Later she adopts two children named Davy and Dora, who have very opposite personalities. Davy is getting into a lot of mischief and Dora is almost always having the mischief done to her. Anne also meets a new friend in a place called Echo Lodge.

Overall, I liked this book and would recommend the book to anyone who likes a good story. Although this book was good, it was a little hard to read because of the bigger words.
